Meet the Niane Family, our Earth Month Heroes!

We sat down with the Niane family from Vermont to find out their tips and tricks for living more sustainably and helping raise environmentally conscious children.

How do you parent while keeping the future in mind?

I'm always trying to teach the little things. We teach them about the classic "3 Rs"—reduce, reuse, recycle. We talk about whether we "need" something when we are purchasing items. We talk to our children a lot about the environment, what harms it and what we can do as a family to help.

What other environmentally conscious choices do you and your family make?

We bought a small home on a good-sized piece of property and we are working little by little to use our land to become more self-sustaining. We have essentially eliminated food waste by feeding a lot of it to the chickens, and the remainder goes to compost.

What advice do you have for families?

I would recommend small steps. Set small, attainable goals. Little change is better than no change. And sometimes trying to make a big change can either be financially unattainable or overwhelming.

EARTH MONTH TIP! Get exclusive offers, try products for free, and take meaningful action in the Generation Good Advocates community, by Seventh Generation®. GenerationGood.net
